

I agree 100% that NHTSA continue to support all vehicle component parts label identification and require all vehicles under 6,000 lbs weight to mark their parts REGARDLESS OF THAT VEHICLE'S theft rate. I believe that every VIN LABEL is alot like every VIN ETCHED Car. The car will be easier to identify for all law enforcement and insurance personnel. I believe the markings will decrease the chop shop operations and theft rate. It certainly will increase recovery rates and probably the arrest rate for people in possession of stolen cars. NO vehicle manufacturer could convince me that vin label marking a car is cost or time prohibitive. Every car and light truck should have been marked by law years ago.
